1987 INSIDE TAXATION

3 1761 11709064 7

Canada

Published annually, Inside Taxation is one of the means Revenue Canada Taxation has of informing the public about how the Department operates. It provides a general explanation of departmental policy and the tax legislation on which it is based, assessment and collection methods, the responsibilities of taxpayers under the law and the departmental services available to them. Inside Taxation also provides a record of operations within the Department throughout calendar year 1987, fiscal year 1986-87 and historical year 1985.

Copies of this publication may be obtained from district offices or Communications Directorate, Revenue Canada Taxation, 875 Heron Road, Ottawa, Canada, K1A 0L8.

Cette publication est aussi disponible en français sous le titre «Les rouages de l'impôt».

Our system of taxation

Canada's tax system not only raises the revenues necessary to run the country but also supports the needs of society as a whole. Money collected in taxes from individuals and corporations helps lower-income families, charities, students, retirees and the disabled. Tax money offers incentives to businesses, large and small. It also boosts the economy and provides social services such as the payment of Old Age Security benefits, Unemployment Insurance benefits and family allowance payments.

Self-assessment

In many countries, tax collection and deductions are taken at source by employers or by government tax collectors. At first glance, Canada's system seems no different — employers deduct income tax from the pay of their employees. However, the important difference is that Canadian taxpayers have the right and responsibility to check and verify their income tax status each year.

Our system of tax collection is based on the principle of self-assessment. The self-assessment system, also used in the United States and Australia, is considered the most economical and efficient method of taxation.

Every resident of Canada and any non-resident with Canadian income has the responsibility of ensuring that taxes have been paid according to the law. On a tax return, the individual lists facts about income and expenses so that the taxpayer and the Department can calculate the share of taxes the individual must pay. In this way, taxpayers make sure that they receive fair and equal treatment under the Income Tax Act.

Tax legislation

While Revenue Canada Taxation administers the tax laws passed by Parliament, it is the Minister of Finance who formulates the government's fiscal and tax policy.

When a new budget is introduced by the Minister of Finance, it proposes certain amendments to tax legislation that become law once they have been debated and approved by Parliament and given Royal Assent. The reasons behind such changes in tax law are explained in budget documents issued by the Department of Finance Canada.

The role of Revenue Canada Taxation

Revenue Canada Taxation is responsible for the administration of income tax legislation enacted by Parliament and for applying the self-assessment system. Its mandate can be summarized as follows:

- 1 To collect the taxes, Canada Pension Plan contributions and Unemployment Insurance premiums imposed under the law by encouraging voluntary compliance and by deterring tax evasion and tax avoidance; and
- 2 To maintain public confidence in the integrity of the tax system by administering tax and related legislation in a fair and professional manner.

The Department collects individual taxpayers' federal income tax as well as their provincial and territorial taxes in all provinces and territories except Quebec in accordance with tax collection agreements between the federal, provincial and territorial governments. It also collects federal and provincial corporate taxes on behalf of all provinces and territories except Ontario, Quebec and Alberta. Revenue Canada Taxation also administered the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act prior to its being repealed in October 1986.

Integrity, impartiality and confidentiality

A self-assessment system can work only when taxpayers understand and readily comply with the law. Revenue Canada Taxation recognizes its responsibility to provide taxpayers with information, assistance and service to encourage such compliance.

It also recognizes the importance of maintaining public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the system. Revenue Canada Taxation employees are expected to apply the Income Tax Act's provisions fairly, uniformly and courteously.

Since Revenue Canada Taxation is responsible for collecting all income tax due, the Department conducts random audits or inspections of returns. These audits make sure that all taxpayers pay their fair share.

The right of taxpayers to expect that any information they supply will be held in confidence is one of the underlying principles of the Canadian tax system, and it is a right that is stringently guarded within the Department.

The Declaration of Taxpayer Rights

The Declaration of Taxpayer Rights was announced in February 1985. The declaration is a consolidation of all taxpayer rights found in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, in statutes and in common law. It is not a legal document but does set out the most important rights concerning the fair treatment of Canadians as taxpayers. The declaration is reproduced in Appendix B.

Assistance to taxpayers

Revenue Canada Taxation recognizes that taxpayers cannot comply with the law unless they know and understand what is expected of them. The Department strives to make the process as understandable and accessible as possible. To this end, the Department publishes income tax guides, pamphlets, Information Circulars and Interpretation Bulletins on specific topics.

Bilingual services

Across the country the Department offers all its services in both English and French. Canada's 16.9 million individual taxpayers and 774,000 corporations can be served in the official language of their choice. All publications and forms are distributed in English and French. Telephone, counter and correspondence services are also available in both official languages in all parts of Canada.

The Department encourages both anglophones in Quebec and francophones outside Quebec to request services and to complete their income tax returns in their first official language.

Enquiry service

The district office

The most convenient point of contact for taxpayers is one of the 36 district offices. District office staff provide information on the filing and status of returns and refunds, explain assessment notices and answer general tax questions through telephone and personal contact. Please refer to the inside back cover for the addresses and phone numbers.

The seasonal centre

Seasonal tax assistance centres (STACs) are operated during the filing season across the country in various communities. These centres are open for periods varying from one day to up to two and one-half months preceding the April 30 deadline for filing individual tax returns.

The seasonal centres are staffed by bilingual district office personnel who are available to provide information to the public and to answer any enquiries taxpayers may have before they file their returns. The centres also stock most tax forms, guides and pamphlets.

During the 1987 tax-filing season, the Department operated 182 STACs in combination with the 36 district offices, which are open year-round. These seasonal tax assistance centres raised to 218 the number of locations offering face-to-face service during the filing season.

The taxation centre

The Department's seven taxation centres, where returns are processed and stored, are responsible for answering correspondence directed to them and for providing written explanations of assessments and answers about the processing of returns. Replies and explanations are written in the official language of the writer.

Assistance to the hearing-impaired

Hearing-impaired taxpayers with access to a Telephone Device for the Deaf (TDD) can obtain tax information and assistance by calling a centralized, bilingual enquiry service at 1-800-665-0354. This service is regularly available weekdays from 8:15 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. CT with extended hours offered during the filing season. For the 1987 tax year the lines were staffed from 8:15 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Thursday from February 22 to April 21 and from 8:15 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. CST from April 21 to April 29. Because the dates for the extended hours change each year, taxpayers who wish to use this service should consult their T1 Guide before telephoning.

Extended telephone hours

The bilingual public enquiries telephone lines in every district office were staffed Monday through Thursday until 6 p.m. from February 22 to April 21 and extended to 8 p.m. from April 25 to April 29, excluding statutory holidays.

This annual service makes it more convenient for taxpayers to get help in completing and filing their returns.

Information about charities

The bilingual toll-free telephone service for taxpayers with questions about registered charities and Canadian amateur athletic associations was kept busy again in 1987.

Individuals who wish to know whether an organization is registered as a charity should contact their local district office during normal business hours. District office hours of operation are listed at the back of the T1 Guide.

Information regarding registration guidelines, departmental policies and other administrative and legislative matters is available from the Department's Charities Division by calling 1-800-267-2384. Local callers can reach Charities Division from within the 613 area code by dialing 954-0410. These numbers are accessible weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. ET.

Problem Resolution Program

The Problem Resolution Program forms a significant part of the work done by the Public Affairs Division in each district office. Problem resolution co-ordinators handle, on a priority basis, cases that cannot be resolved through normal channels.

A key objective of the program is to trace the source of problem trends as they emerge and to make recommendations so that similar instances will not occur. In so doing, the program provides another safeguard for taxpayer rights.

Publications

Revenue Canada Taxation issues a wide variety of general and technical publications designed to assist taxpayers in understanding the tax system. These are published in both official languages and, except for Taxation Statistics, are available free of charge from district offices. Appendix A lists all the forms and publications available for use by the public.

Tax guides

The income tax guide that accompanies each tax return provides the most important source of taxpayer information. Other guides are also produced to meet the needs of specific groups of taxpayers. Please refer to the list of titles at the end of this chapter.

Assistance to the visually-impaired

The Department records, in English and French, an audio version of the T1 Individual Guide on cassette to assist visually-impaired taxpayers in completing their returns. The Audio Guide will be available for the 1988 filing season from service organizations for the blind and from district taxation offices.

Pamphlets and leaflets

Specific aspects of taxation are dealt with in non-technical language in the six series of pamphlets and leaflets that the Department produces annually in English and French. Please refer to the list of titles at the end of this chapter.

Technical publications

Bilingual Information Circulars and Interpretation Bulletins are issued in response to the demand for information covering administrative matters and interpretations of the laws the Department administers. These series are of a technical nature and are used primarily by accountants, lawyers and other tax specialists. Annual indexes to the Circulars and Bulletins are available at all district offices.

The Department also publishes an annual comprehensive profile of the tax-filing public based on an in-depth analysis of individual tax returns called Taxation Statistics. The 1987 edition (ISBN 0-660-53857-1) provides statistical information for the 1985 taxation year and is available in bilingual format for $14.95 in Canada through Supply and Services Canada or from bookstores authorized to sell government publications. For those ordering from outside Canada, the 1987 edition is $17.95 Canadian. Samples of the statistics available in Taxation Statistics are contained in Chapter 12.

Advance income tax rulings

Revenue Canada Taxation also publishes advance income tax rulings as described below. The rulings are published and made available for the guidance of other taxpayers contemplating similar transactions. Certain features of the transaction on which the ruling was given and the identities of the taxpayers are disguised to protect confidentiality.

On request, the Department will provide taxpayers with a binding ruling advising them how it will interpret specific provisions of the tax law involved in transactions they are contemplating. A fee of $65 per hour is currently charged for this service. Certain matters on which the Department is unable to rule are discussed in Information Circular IC 70-6R2, Advance Income Tax Rulings. Requests should be sent to Rulings Directorate, Revenue Canada Taxation, 875 Heron Road, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0L8.

Public affairs officers

Public affairs officers in the district offices work directly with taxpayers, community leaders, organizations and the local media. They are involved in all the Department's public information programs described in the remainder of this chapter.

Media information

A wide range of tax information is supplied annually to the print and broadcast media for use in their public service programming.

Half-hour closed-captioned television programs designed to help taxpayers complete a return are offered during the filing season to stations across the country in both English and French.

Resource packages giving information concerning topics of common taxpayer interest and changes in tax legislation are prepared for radio stations, for daily and community newspapers and for foreign-language media serving areas with large ethnic populations.

The Department produces for Canada's ethnic population a foreign-language media kit, Understanding Your Income Tax, in six languages: Chinese, Greek, Italian, Polish, Portuguese and Spanish. The kit provides basic tax information that is useful to all types of media. It is also available in English and French.

Public service announcements on similar topics are distributed to television stations during the filing season. This material includes special information packages made available to media serving farming or fishing communities or the information needs of senior citizens.

Volunteer Program

The Volunteer Program helps taxpayers who cannot complete their own returns because of age, infirmity, language or other difficulty.

Through its district offices across Canada, Revenue Canada Taxation offers special training sessions to teach representatives of community organizations and other interested individuals how to complete basic tax returns. Volunteers also receive a kit of handy reference material.

These volunteers then offer assistance, free of charge, through their community organizations or as a direct public service to other taxpayers.

Individuals who wish to become volunteers are invited to contact the public affairs officer in their district taxation office. The Department will then arrange a convenient time and place for tax training.

Native Peoples Outreach Program

The Native Peoples Outreach Program is similar to the Volunteer Program but is designed to respond to the special needs of Indian, Métis and Inuit peoples. It provides expertise and material for the training of band representatives from reserves in simple tax situations. Once trained the representatives help other members of the band complete their tax return.

Teaching Taxes

Revenue Canada Taxation originally developed the Teaching Taxes program to introduce students to the history and mechanics of Canada's taxation system. The Department supplies material free of charge to more than 6,000 teachers and nearly half a million students who participate annually in the program which is now used in economics, accounting, business, mathematics, consumer education, social studies and even language courses in high schools and colleges across the country.

Films, videocassettes and filmstrips to supplement the program's printed materials are also available.

Teaching Taxes materials can be ordered by any teacher from the Public Affairs Division of district offices.

Rural Tax Scene kit

The Department prepares a kit of tax information specifically for farmers. Copies of these kits are sent to the provincial governments and to district offices who then distribute them to agricultural organizations and other groups that serve the farming community. Representatives of these organizations find the material useful when they deal with individual farmers and when they present talks or seminars on farm finances.

Films

The Department has produced five films, which are available in both official languages. The following may be borrowed from local offices of the National Film Board:

- "Tax: The Outcome of Income" describes the historical evolution of Canadian income tax.
- "Tax Is Not a Four-Letter Word" is an animated film about a somewhat unusual tax collector.
- "Meet the Martins" shows the advantages of completing tax returns correctly.
- "A Choice of Two" and "The Sloane Affair" are feature-length dramatizations of two cases of corporate tax evasion.

Improving taxpayer service using technology

The Department is committed to using computer technology to increase efficiency and improve taxpayer service. In 1987 several technological innovations were implemented nationally and others were launched on a pilot-project basis.

Online Reassessment Program

The Online Reassessment Program (Online RAP) was put into effect across the country in 1987. Online RAP is a computer system that allows assessors, using a computer terminal, to process taxpayer reassessment requests. The result is that taxpayers who request simple, mathematical adjustments to their assessments will have a much shorter wait for their reassessment notice since the adjustment is now made directly on the mainframe computer. This direct access to the mainframe computer eliminates the time-consuming paperwork that had previously added extra steps to the reassessment procedure.

Appeals Information Reporting System

The implementation of the Appeals Information and Reporting System (AIRS) has provided a fully automated national information network for direct access and control of notices of objection. The system will be extended in 1988 to account for the inventory of appeals before the courts.

Online Taxpayer Contact System

The research and specifications for the Online Taxpayer Contact System were completed in 1987. This system will allow personalized contact with taxpayers regarding any errors found at the initial processing stage. Clear and precise messages will inform the taxpayer of the problem and ask that the correct information be submitted. The Online Taxpayer Contact System is currently being tested and will be implemented nationally by 1989.

Automated Collection System

The Automated Collection System (ACS) was another new system that was tested in 1987. ACS will improve the work flows for collections staff by identifying accounts that are at risk, allowing follow-up action and providing instant access to the history of the account.

Public Enquiries Information Bank: An update

The Public Enquiries Information Bank, or PEIB as it is known, was run as a pilot project in the Ottawa District Office in 1986 and 1987. Results show that this new technology can improve the Department's ability to provide timely and correct information to taxpayers.

During the 1987 filing season and throughout the year, the Public Enquiries staff at the Ottawa District Office used their computer terminals for immediate access to taxpayer information as well as access to resource material such as Interpretation Bulletins, Information Circulars, the law and regulations and other departmental information. The data bank was updated as necessary overnight to ensure it was current at all times.

Once implemented in all district offices, this data bank will provide increased efficiency, accuracy and better service in handling more than nine million taxpayer enquiries a year across Canada.

It is contemplated that PEIB will be implemented nationally over four years beginning with the Ontario Region in 1988.

TeleRefund: An update

This pilot project was set up in the Montréal, Saint-Hubert and Laval districts for the 1987 filing season to provide information for 1986 tax returns.

TeleRefund is an automated telephone refund enquiry service that gives taxpayers information about the mailing date of their federal income tax refund.

During the pilot period of 1987, some 200,000 calls were successfully replied to by TeleRefund. The project was a success and plans are being made to have TeleRefund available on a national scale within the next two years.

When this automated system is implemented nationally, push button telephone users will enjoy longer hours of service, and a large portion of the routine district office refund call load will be made to TeleRefund so that more enquiries staff will be free to serve taxpayers calling on other matters.

In 1987 the Department, as the country's prime revenue collector, faced many new challenges.

Contributing to tax reform

Officials of Revenue Canada Taxation and the Department of Finance Canada collaborated on the development of tax reform measures. The implications of various proposals were discussed from a tax administration perspective. Taxation officials also provided technical assistance in drafting legislation.

1987 T1 Guide and return

The goal each year in preparing the tax guides and returns is to make filing a return as efficient and manageable as possible for the taxpayer. For 1987 a number of changes were made to achieve this goal.

The General and Special Guides

Immediately noticeable are the changes to the front and back covers of the T1 General and Special Guides. The front covers were redesigned; the back covers have been devoted entirely to "Privacy and Confidentiality" to ensure that taxpayers are aware of the high standards of confidentiality within Revenue Canada Taxation and to list the information taxpayers must provide before confidential details about their return may be released to them or their representative.

A special effort was made to simplify the language used in the General and Special Guides. Examples and charts were added. "You were asking?" questions and answers are now located in the relevant areas throughout the General Guide. A new feature called "Tax Tips" highlights helpful information.

A comprehensive Index, located towards the back of the General Guide, replaces the Table of Contents. The district office telephone numbers and addresses have been moved to the inside of the back cover, and the 1988 district office extended hours of operation have been included.

Supplementary guides

Two new supplementary guides were added for the 1987 tax year. The Pension and RRSP Guide describes the various types of plans and contribution requirements. Numerous examples illustrate real life situations. The guide is available in English or French from district offices.

The Guide for Northern Residents Deductions contains copies of the form that must be filed to claim the deductions, and it explains who qualifies for the deductions and how to claim them. The bilingual guide will be distributed door-to-door in the prescribed areas early in 1988 and will also be available from district offices.

The 1987 return

Changes have been made to the returns as well. While most will not be obvious to taxpayers, the more evident changes include: the addition of a new line 255 on both the General and Special returns for those claiming the northern residents deductions; Schedules 9 and 11 have been switched so that Schedule 9 becomes the "Federal Sales Tax Credit" schedule and Schedule 11 is now "Medical Expenses." This change was made so that the "Federal Sales Tax Credit" and "Child Tax Credit" schedules could be put on the same page.

Taxation's new Central Region

In 1987 the heavily populated Ontario Region was divided into two regions with the establishment of the new Central Region.

The Central Region office is located in Ottawa and is responsible for the operations of the Ottawa Taxation Centre and the district offices located in Ottawa, Toronto, Scarborough and Mississauga. The Sudbury Taxation Centre and the other Ontario district offices continue to report to the Ontario Region, which is located in London.

Security

Revisions to the Department's security policy were put into effect in 1987. The new measures are designed to strengthen security in the Department, provide for the testing of systems for the transportation of sensitive data, and the ongoing assessment of the physical security of buildings and premises.

Consultation

In 1987 the Department accelerated its efforts to consult with "client groups." Liaison with the tax community included semi-annual meetings with the Minister's Advisory Council on Tax Administration (MACTA), and annual meetings with the Tax Executives Institute. Frequent meetings were also held with various other groups representing the interests of small business, manufacturers, insurance companies, bankers and the voluntary sector.

Also in 1987, Revenue Canada Taxation hosted the 21st annual General Assembly of the Inter-American Centre of Tax Administrators (CIAT) in Ottawa. More than 150 delegates from 50 countries attended the week-long assembly. Many Taxation employees, working in five languages, served as volunteers for the assembly.

How taxes are collected

Source deductions

When Canadians file their tax returns each spring, most have already paid all or part of their taxes through deductions made by their employers from their incomes.

Employers remit these funds to Revenue Canada Taxation each month, either through their banks or directly to the appropriate taxation centre. All deductions from each employer are recorded on computer files.

Co-operation of employers is therefore an essential element of the self-assessment system. To facilitate their task, Revenue Canada Taxation provides employers with tax deduction tables to guide them in determining the amount of federal and provincial income tax to be withheld from their employees' salaries. Employers also receive an Employer's and Trustee's Guide for Filing of T4-T4A and T4F Return which they report to Taxation the deductions they have made from their employees' salaries and to prepare T4 slips for each employee.

Number of taxpayers subject to source deductions in 1986	14,991,447
---	------------

Number of active employer accounts with Revenue Canada Taxation at December 31, 1986	1,159,699
---	-----------

Total source deductions for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1987	$65,571,900,000

Some employers fail to remit to the Department the amounts they have deducted from their employees' pay cheques, thus becoming subject to prosecution and fines.

Number of employers prosecuted from April 1, 1986 to March 31, 1987 for failure to remit source deductions	519

Instalment payments

Some types of income are not subject to deduction of tax at source including certain pension payments, alimony and maintenance payments, tips and gratuities, bond interest, dividends, rental and investment income and income from self-employment.

All individuals, except those whose chief source of income is farming or fishing, are required to make quarterly instalment payments of income tax unless tax is deducted at source from at least three-quarters of their net income or their net federal tax payable for the current or preceding year does not exceed $1,000.

Individuals

Taxpayers may determine their instalment payments in two ways:

- 1 They may estimate what their tax payable for the year will be and calculate instalments on this amount; or
- 2 They may base their current instalments on the amount of tax payable for the preceding year.

For help with this calculation, taxpayers are invited to use the Instalment Guide for Individuals available in district offices.

Taxpayers who pay by quarterly instalments must remit one-quarter of the total amount required on or before the last day of March, June, September and December.

Farmers and fishermen

Farmers and fishermen whose tax for the current or preceding year is more than $1,000 also pay by instalments but on a different schedule. One instalment is due on December 31, with the balance payable on or before April 30 of the following year. The instalment payment may be based on either the tax payable for the preceding year or the estimated tax payable for the current year and should be equal to two-thirds of the tax so calculated. The Instalment Guide for Farmers and Fishermen is available from district offices.

Corporations

Corporations remit income tax in monthly instalments, based on one of three options. The balance of tax due must be paid within two, or in some cases, three months of the end of the corporation's fiscal year. An Instalment Guide for Corporations is available from district offices.

Interest on late payments

Taxpayers who are required to pay tax by instalments and who have an unpaid balance on the due date must pay interest compounded on a daily basis. Interest is calculated daily on unpaid income tax, penalties, late and deficient tax instalments and on overpayments made to taxpayers. There is no provision in the Income Tax Act to permit the cancellation of properly assessed fines, penalties and interest.

When assessing a return, on the other hand, the Department pays interest on refunds. The rate of interest for taxpayers and for the Department is adjusted every three months based on the average interest rate on 91-day treasury bills issued during the first month of the preceding quarter. A departmental news release is issued every quarter to announce the revised rate.

Collection of tax arrears

The Department takes a firm but fair approach to taxpayers who do not pay their taxes by the due date. If these taxpayers do not make satisfactory payment arrangements after they receive their notice of assessment, they receive a letter asking them to pay their outstanding balance. If they still do not pay or respond to the Department's request, they receive a second letter asking for full payment and advising them to contact the Department to avoid legal action. If their payment is still outstanding, a Taxation employee contacts them personally, whenever possible, to give them one final opportunity to pay or make satisfactory payment arrangements.

When taxpayers can show that they are unable to pay the full amount they owe immediately, the Department may accept a short-term arrangement based on the taxpayers' current and future ability to pay or borrow.

In cases where these efforts still do not result in the settlement of the debt, Revenue Canada may garnishee taxpayers' wages or confiscate and sell their assets.

Non-residents

Individuals who are not resident in Canada must pay non-resident tax on certain income from Canadian sources including interest, dividends, management fees, income from estates and trusts, rents, royalties, alimony, pensions and annuities. This non-resident tax is provided for in Part XIII of the Income Tax Act and is required to be withheld at source. The statutory rate of non-resident tax is 25 per cent unless a tax treaty prescribes a different rate.

Non-residents are not required to file an income tax return to report the amount withheld. However, those who receive certain income from Canadian sources including alimony, pension and rentals from real property, may choose to file a return. Non-residents who do so are subject to the same rates of tax and may be entitled to all or some of the same deductions as Canadian residents, and thus they may be entitled to a refund of all or part of the tax.

In addition to the withholding tax described above, non-residents who have been employed in Canada, carried on a business in Canada or disposed of taxable Canadian property in Canada are taxable in Canada on their income derived from such activities. This general rule, however, may be modified by bilateral tax treaties negotiated by Canada.

Persons who pay taxes in Canada in these circumstances must file an income tax return in the normal manner.

Canadians outside Canada

Taxpayers who live abroad but who are considered to be residents of Canada for tax purposes must file a return and they must report their income from all sources. The federal tax imposed on Canadians living abroad includes an additional tax of 47 per cent of "Basic Federal Tax." This is equivalent to a provincial tax rate (see Chapter 7, "Rate structure for 1987") except that the tax is paid to the federal government.

Tax treaties

To prevent taxation of the same income by two different countries, Canada has tax treaties with the following countries:

- | | |
|--------------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| • Australia | • Japan |
| • Austria | • Kenya |
| • Bangladesh | • Korea, The Republic of |

Tax treaties have also been approved by the Canadian Parliament with Cameroon, Liberia, Poland and Zambia. Since instruments of ratification have not yet been exchanged with the governments of these countries, these tax treaties are not yet in force.

The effective rate of non-resident tax under most treaties varies between 10 and 25 per cent. When there is a conflict between the provisions of the Income Tax Act and those of an agreement with another country, the provisions of the agreement prevail.

Tax returns and how they are processed

By means of the tax return, taxpayers have the opportunity each year to check and verify their income tax status. The return, therefore, must be designed to accommodate not only the reporting needs of millions of taxpayers but also the processing system used by Revenue Canada Taxation.

The form, which lists the various types of income taxpayers must report as well as the exemptions and deductions they may be entitled to claim, has been developed with a view to providing taxpayers with the quickest and most accurate service.

Individuals

Individuals who have previously filed tax returns automatically receive a personalized form T1, "Federal and Provincial Individual Income Tax Return." Filers will receive either the T1 General or T1 Special, based on the information they reported in their previous year's return.

Approximately two-thirds of all Canadian taxpayers use the T1 General return, while the remainder use the T1 Special return. The T1 Special is a shorter return than the T1 General and can be used by taxfilers with straightforward tax situations.

Copies of the T1 General are available in district offices and post offices across Canada for use by individuals filing their first return or by those who did not receive a personalized return. There is also a non-resident version of the T1 General for Canadian taxpayers who were living outside Canada on December 31.

Taxpayers filing T1 General returns completed for them the previous year by a tax return preparer receive by mail two copies of a T1 identification label. Those taxpayers who continue to use the services of a tax return preparer give the labels to the return preparer to place at the top of the working and mailing copies of the return. Those who choose instead to complete their own return place the labels on the copies of the return they prepared themselves. Return packages for those who do not receive a personalized form are available at post offices and district taxation offices.

The T1 Special is a simpler return with fewer income and deduction items. It is designed for taxfilers whose tax situation is straightforward. The T1 Special is only available in the personalized format. The T1 Special is mailed to a taxpayer only if the information on the taxpayer's previous return indicates that the longer General is not necessary. The T1 Special is not available at district offices or post offices.

Thirty-eight separate versions of each return are produced for use in every province and territory, as well as for Canadian taxpayers residing outside Canada. All are revised annually. All returns are available in both official languages and must be filed by the April 30 deadline.

Estimated number of returns processed in 1987

for individuals	16,900,000
for corporations	774,000

Corporations

Corporations must file a federal T2 "Corporation Income Tax Return" whether or not they have taxable income for the year. A separate provincial return must also be filed by corporations located in Quebec, Ontario and Alberta since these three provinces collect their own corporate income tax.

The T2 is designed for use in any tax year, and there is only one version which is used by all corporations in all Canadian provinces and territories. Corporations must normally file their returns within six months from the end of the corporation's fiscal period. T2 returns can be mailed to the taxation centre serving the area where the corporation's head office is located or delivered by hand to the district office where the corporation's head office is located.

Trusts

The T3 "Trust Information Return and Income Tax Return" must be completed by persons acting in a fiduciary capacity. These would include executors, administrators, assignees or certain receivers who have control of or receive income, gains or profits on behalf of some other person. A T3 must be filed if

- either the total income or gross income exceeds $500, or
- the income designated or allocated to any single beneficiary exceeds $100, or
- any portion of the income is taxable in the hands of the fiduciary, or
- any portion of the income is distributable to a non-resident beneficiary.

The T3 return should be mailed to the taxation centre serving the area where the trust is located or delivered to the district office within 90 days from the end of the taxation year of the trust.

T1 Generals filed for 1985 taxation year	11,439,585
T1 Specials filed for 1985 taxation year	4,424,901
1985 returns claiming refunds	11,209,472
1985 returns declaring amounts owing	2,067,621
1985 returns of immigrants	32,400
1985 returns of emigrants	17,573
1985 returns of first-time filers	2,541,103
1985 returns filed in the French language	3,546,915

Processing of T1 returns

Tax returns from Canada's 16.9 million individual taxpayers are received in one of the taxation centres in St. John's, Jonquière, Shawinigan-Sud, Ottawa, Sudbury, Winnipeg or Surrey. Across Canada from 150,000 to 600,000 returns arrive daily during the height of the filing season, which extends from February to April. The processing of returns can be summarized in five main steps.

- 1 Tax return envelopes are opened automatically.

Returns with payments attached go to the Cash Section which records the amounts.

Cheques are endorsed mechanically, microfilmed and credited to the taxpayer's account.

- 2 Returns are sent for assessing.

Assessors examine the returns to ensure that all required supporting documents are enclosed and that the amounts on the information slips agree with those on the return.

- 3 Operators use computer terminals with video screens to enter the information on each return.

When it seems that the operator, assessor or taxpayer has made an error, the computer displays the items in question on the screen or rejects the data completely. This ensures that these items are re-examined and corrected.

In the case of a taxpayer error, an explanation of the error is printed on the notice of assessment mailed to the taxpayer. If additional information, receipts or slips are needed to ensure the accuracy of an assessment, the Department attempts to contact the taxpayer by letter. This causes a slight delay in processing the return.

- 4 After processing is completed, notices of assessment and, where applicable, refund cheques are mailed out to each taxpayer.

If a taxpayer is to receive a refund, the cheque is issued and mailed by Supply and Services Canada.

- 5 Finally, taxpayer returns are stored in the Taxroll Division of the taxation centre. If you live in Hamilton, for example, your return is processed and stored at the Sudbury Taxation Centre.

Written requests for information should be addressed to the taxation centres, while taxpayers who wish to discuss their return by telephone or in person should contact their district office.

Canada Pension Plan and Unemployment Insurance

Canada Pension Plan

The Canada Pension Plan (CPP) provides retirement pensions, disability pensions, benefits for dependent children of disabled contributors, death benefits and survivor benefits on the death of a contributor. It operates in all provinces except Quebec, which has a similar plan, the Quebec Pension Plan.

Revenue Canada Taxation determines who is covered by the Canada Pension Plan and collects contributions payable from employers, employees and self-employed persons. Health and Welfare Canada administers the benefit provisions and has overall responsibility for the plan.

Participation in CPP is compulsory for almost everyone who is 18 or older but under 70 years of age who had 1987 annual earnings of more than $2,500 from pensionable employment and who are insured residents of Canada with net income of more than $2,500.

Employees

Employers are required to deduct CPP contributions from their employees' gross salaries. They must also match these contributions dollar for dollar and remit the total amount to the Department each month along with income tax deducted.

CPP contributions are reported on employees' T4 slips and can be claimed as a deduction from income for tax purposes. Any overpayment will be refunded.

Self-employed individuals

Self-employed persons pay 3.8 per cent of their net income between the minimum of $2,500 and the maximum pensionable earnings ($25,900). This is equivalent to the combined employer and employee CPP contributions. CPP contributions are paid at the same time as quarterly income tax instalments.

Total CPP contributions paid for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1987	$4,975,733,000
Pensionable earnings
minimum	$2,500
maximum	$25,900
Maximum contributions deductible for 1987
for employees	$444.60
for self-employed persons	$889.20

Unemployment Insurance

Revenue Canada Taxation also collects Unemployment Insurance (UI) premiums and determines who may participate in the program and the types of employment that the UI program covers. Employment and Immigration Canada (CEIC) is responsible for the payment of benefits and related matters.

The rate of premiums for insured persons is determined each year by Employment and Immigration Canada by virtue of the Unemployment Insurance Act. In 1987, employees paid 2.35 per cent of insurable earnings ($2.35 for each $100). Employers deduct UI premiums from their employees' salaries as they do CPP contributions. Employers also pay a premium rate fixed at 1.4 times the insured person's premium. This rate may be reduced if an approved sick leave plan is maintained.

UI premiums are reported on each employee's T4 slip and, as with CPP contributions, they are deductible from income for tax purposes.

Generally, payment of employer and employee premiums is compulsory for an employee under a contract of service. With some minor exceptions, as outlined in the publications listed on the next page, self-employed persons are not covered by the plan.

Total UI premiums paid from April 1, 1986 to March 31, 1987	$9,813,637,000
Maximum weekly insurable earnings subject to UI in 1987	$530
Maximum UI premiums deductible in 1987 (based on 52 weekly pay periods \times $12.46)	$647.92

Assistance to employers and self-employed individuals

Each year, Revenue Canada Taxation provides employers with tables showing the current CPP contributions and UI premiums deductible from their employees' salaries.

A number of publications also provide information on CPP and UI deductions. The following can be obtained in either official language from any district office:

- The Canada Pension Plan – Information for the Self-Employed
- Unemployment Insurance Coverage – Information for Barbers and Hairdressers
- Unemployment Insurance Coverage – Information for Taxi and Passenger Vehicle Operators
- Fishermen and Unemployment Insurance
- Unemployment Insurance Coverage for Self-Employed Fishermen

Provincial income taxes

The federal government collects provincial income tax for most provinces and accounts to the provincial governments for tax collected on their behalf. This means that taxpayers in those provinces do not have to file separate income tax returns with different governments. However, Quebec collects its own personal and corporate income taxes, while Ontario and Alberta collect their own corporate income tax.

Individuals

To calculate individual taxes, the appropriate provincial rate is applied to the basic federal tax. Saskatchewan, Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario also have provisions for tax reductions based on formulas that differ from province to province. The provincial tax payable in the Alberta and Ontario tax tables includes the reduction. In Saskatchewan and Manitoba, the reduction is calculated separately.

There are also provincial tax credits available to certain residents of all the provinces and territories except Quebec and Newfoundland.

Corporations

Provincial corporation income taxes are calculated by applying the appropriate provincial rate to the federal taxable income. The resulting provincial tax may then be reduced by provincial tax rebates or credits for corporations located in Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, British Columbia and the Yukon.

Auditing

The great majority of Canadians comply voluntarily with the requirements of the Income Tax Act. To ensure that all are paying their fair share and to protect the integrity of the self-assessment system, audits are necessary.

Revenue Canada Taxation's audit program is directed mainly at taxpayers who have sources of income other than a regular salary, such as self-employed individuals including professionals, business people, farmers, and people who receive income from fishing, investments, rentals and commissions. Trusts and corporate taxpayers are also covered by the Department's audit program, with the largest corporations being subject to more frequent audits.

Ensuring a fair audit

In assessing and collecting taxes, the Department's principal objective is to ensure the fair and impartial treatment of every taxpayer. Audits are reviewed in the district offices, while head office co-ordinates and tests these reviews to make certain that tax laws are applied consistently and uniformly.

Throughout the year, a constant evaluation of the information submitted on the returns of individuals, employers, corporations and trusts is undertaken. By applying various statistical formulas or file selection criteria to the facts on hand, taxation centre computers generate lists of taxpayer returns that present a risk of non-compliance.

If the Department notices a significant lack of compliance with tax laws among any group of taxpayers, all returns within that group may come under closer scrutiny. This approach makes optimum use of departmental resources and supports voluntary compliance.

How tax returns are audited

Since most taxpayers receive salaries or wages from which tax is deducted at source, it is relatively easy to verify the majority of returns by referring to information provided by employers. This can be done as a part of routine processing. Other types of returns are considerably more complex and may require the audit of supporting records.

The type of audit conducted by the Department varies with the complexity of the taxpayer's return. One type of audit is to clear up details of income, expenses and transactions reported by taxpayers on their returns. Questions are usually resolved by auditors through a letter, a telephone call or a personal interview with the taxpayer. Another type may involve a limited or detailed examination of a taxpayer's records. This type of audit can take anywhere from a few days to several weeks to complete. Revenue Canada staff may audit the records of small businesses, professionals, farmers, and examine the complex records kept by larger companies. Large companies are audited more frequently because of the complexity of tax issues involved.

Some audits are conducted on an industry-wide basis and involve the co-ordinated audits of a number of corporations within one industry. This ensures a consistent approach and is most effective for industries with specialized operating, accounting and tax law application.

Taxpayer records and files

Taxpayers must keep books and records, including supporting documents, in an orderly manner at their place of business or their residence in Canada. In general, these business records and supporting documents must be kept for at least six years from the end of the last taxation year to which they relate.

Taxpayers who wish to destroy books or records must apply in writing to the director of the district office in their area. Revenue Canada Taxation may grant permission to destroy records only for income tax purposes. Permission may also be required from other authorities such as other federal departments and provincial, territorial or municipal governments.

Reassessments and penalties

If the Department believes the taxpayer understated the amount of tax knowingly or as a result of gross negligence, the taxpayer is informed that a penalty is being considered and is invited to present reasons why it should not be applied. When the taxpayer's response is received, the full circumstances are reviewed at a more senior level. The Department may then determine that a penalty, usually equal to 25 per cent of the understatement of both federal and provincial tax, should be applied.

A taxpayer who receives a reassessment notice as the result of an audit has the right to file a notice of objection within 90 days of the date of the reassessment notice.

If it appears that a taxpayer deliberately attempted to defraud the government and, by extension, all Canadians of money owing, the case will be referred to the Special Investigations Division, which deals with instances of suspected tax evasion.

More detailed information on the audit program is available in Information Circular IC 71-14R3, The Tax Audit.

Voluntary disclosures

Voluntary compliance with Canada's tax laws by corporations and individuals is a major contributing factor to the efficient administration of Revenue Canada Taxation's statutory and fiscal responsibilities. The Department acknowledges the importance of voluntary disclosures by formally adopting a policy of encouraging taxpayers to come forward of their own volition to correct deficiencies in their past reportings or dealings with the Department. This policy is described in detail in Information Circular IC 85-1, Voluntary Disclosures.

In general, it is the practice of Revenue Canada Taxation that any person who has failed to file a return required under any section of the legislation administered by the Department, or who has filed incorrect returns, and subsequently makes a voluntary disclosure pertaining to those returns that is substantially complete, will be permitted to settle any liability of tax with statutory interest and late-filing penalties. The Department will not prosecute such persons or seek to impose any civil penalties for gross negligence or willful evasion. The identity of any person making a voluntary disclosure will be held in confidence as are all matters between the Department and those filing with it. Any persons who wish to avail themselves of this administrative policy should contact the director of their district office.

Compliance

Canada's self-assessment taxation system relies on the honesty of taxpayers and their willingness to comply with tax laws. Voluntary compliance ensures the fairness of the system. Non-compliance undermines that fairness by placing the total tax burden on the shoulders of the vast majority of taxpayers who do comply.

Promoting compliance

To encourage and support taxpayers and to ensure the fairness of the system, Revenue Canada Taxation promotes compliance in many ways. This promotion is essential to raising the overall level of compliance among Canadian taxpayers. For example, the Department places great emphasis on service to taxpayers, such as providing timely information and open communication with departmental staff.

The Department also has compliance programs in place to guarantee the fairness of the taxation system. These programs ensure that taxpayers pay their fair share – no more, no less.

Compliance programs

Unreported income is the single largest area of non-compliance. Other major areas include tax avoidance and falsification of financial records.

Revenue Canada Taxation's compliance work focuses on five areas: audit, examination, delinquent action, source deductions and special investigations.

The audit program is concerned with detecting non-compliance among taxpayers whose income comes from sources other than salaries and wages.

The examination program has three components: office examination, matching and post-assessing. The program concentrates on taxpayers who report rental, investment and commission income as well as self-employed individuals and corporations at the low end of the gross income range. Matching looks at the detection and correction of cases of unreported income and incorrect spousal-related claims, for instance, the child tax credit, the married exemption and child care expenses. Post-assessing identifies and corrects improper or incorrect claims.

The purpose of the delinquent action program is to obtain both income tax returns and third party information returns required by the Income Tax Act. This program looks at both late filers and non-filers to ensure that those who should file a tax return do so.

The source deductions program checks the records of delinquent employers in order to find out how much these employers have not deducted or remitted. This program also conducts audits of payments made to non-residents, for instance, interest, dividends, royalties, with the objective of uncovering income that is subject to non-resident tax. In addition, the program audits benefits and employment income to uncover unreported benefits that have been given to employees and reviews seemingly incorrect deductions of CPP/UI from reported pensionable and insurable earnings.

The special investigations program conducts criminal investigations and prosecutes significant cases of deliberate or willful tax evasion.

Tax planning

Some taxpayers take advantage of measures that minimize their tax without actually going against the letter of the law. This is called tax avoidance.

While taxpayers certainly have the right to arrange their finances so that they pay the least amount of tax within the law, Revenue Canada Taxation has a responsibility to review fiscal advantages to determine whether they are in conformity with the provisions of the Income Tax Act.

Publicity

While the Department does not issue information on individual convictions, departmental officials are expected to answer any media requests for information that is on public record. In addition, the Department releases on a regular basis a general report on tax evasion prosecutions and convictions.

Appeals

Under the Declaration of Taxpayer Rights, taxpayers are entitled to object to an income tax assessment or reassessment if they think that the law has been applied incorrectly. The appeal process starts at the district office level.

District office contact

Taxpayers who do not understand or who disagree with a notice of assessment or reassessment should first contact the nearest district office for an explanation. They can do so by telephone, in writing or in person.

Since most disputes result from a misunderstanding of the facts, taxpayers can often clarify the facts and avoid the need to use the formal objection process. Indeed, a large number of cases are resolved at this level to the satisfaction of both the taxpayer and the Department.

Notice of objection

After discussions with the district office, a taxpayer who still disagrees can file a notice of objection within 90 days from the date of issue of the assessment or reassessment notice. The taxpayer should send the notice of objection (Form T400A, available at district offices) by registered mail to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue for Taxation, 875 Heron Road, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0L8. This is the first formal step in the appeal process.

An appeals officer in a district office or taxation centre will conduct an impartial review of the case. This officer will contact the taxpayer to discuss the issues in dispute and will then make recommendations to the chief of Appeals.

Tax Court of Canada

A taxpayer may appeal to the Tax Court of Canada within 90 days from the date the Department mails its decision on a notice of objection. Under the Income Tax Act, the taxpayer may also appeal to the Tax Court of Canada when the taxpayer has not been notified of the decision within 90 days from the date a notice of objection has been served. This is the next formal step in the appeal process.

Federal Court of Canada

A taxpayer has the option of appealing directly to the Federal Court of Canada, Trial Division, rather than to the Tax Court of Canada, within the same time period allowed for an appeal to the Tax Court of Canada. A taxpayer or the Department may appeal a decision of the Tax Court of Canada to the Federal Court of Canada. Judgments of the Federal Court, Trial Division can be appealed to the Federal Court of Appeal and decisions of this court can be appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada with that court's permission.

Taxation's organization

Taxation's organization is constantly evolving to better respond to taxpayers' needs. Head office, located in Ottawa, consists of five branches: Communications and Corporate Development, Policy and Systems, Management Services, Legislative and Intergovernmental Affairs, and Appeals.

The Department also has an extensive field organization of 36 district offices and seven taxation centres whose activities are co-ordinated by five regional offices. District offices provide direct service to the public, while the taxation centres process and store income tax returns.

At June 10, 1987, the number of continuing employees in

Employment at Revenue Canada Taxation

Revenue Canada Taxation is committed to the principle of equal access to employment for both official languages groups. Based on the linguistic designation of its offices, Taxation makes every effort to help employees work in the official language of their choice.

The Department is also committed to the goals of the Affirmative Action program (now called Employment Equity). This program, which is aimed at members of certain target groups, encourages employment practices designed to eliminate and prevent barriers affecting aboriginal peoples, disabled persons, members of visible minorities and women.

Taxation also offers a wide gamut of job-related training through its Centre for Career Development. This includes training for all auditors and collections officers new to the Department as well as training for central enquiries officers. Training is also provided each year for the temporary employees who are hired for the initial assessment of the T1 returns.

Head office

Departmental plans and policies are developed at head office, the administrative decision centre of Revenue Canada Taxation. Five assistant deputy ministers, responsible for the Communications and Corporate Development, Policy and Systems, Management Services, Legislative and Intergovernmental Affairs, and Appeals branches, report directly to the deputy minister. The director of Legal Services serves in an advisory capacity to the deputy minister.

District offices

The 36 district offices provide the main point of contact between the Department and Canada's 17.7 million individual and corporate taxpayers. They conduct audits and communicate with taxpayers by telephone or in person.

Taxpayers can obtain from their district office the forms, not received by mail, as well as other publications that they require to fulfill their tax obligations. District office staff answer telephone and over-the-counter enquiries concerning notices of assessments, taxpayer refunds, payment of tax in arrears and late-filed returns. Taxpayers also contact district offices to apply for authorization to destroy records and files.

Seasonal centres

To provide information and assistance to a greater number of taxpayers during the months leading up to the April 30 filing deadline, many district offices operate seasonal centres in neighbouring communities. These centres are staffed by bilingual district office personnel who distribute tax publications in both official languages and answer enquiries concerning the preparation of tax returns.

Taxation centres

The processing of returns takes place in the taxation centres. They send out notices of assessment to taxpayers and forward requests to issue refund cheques to Supply and Services Canada. When processing is completed, tax files are stored at the centres.

The taxation centres also answer taxpayers' letters of enquiry and taxpayer correspondence pertaining to the filing of returns and to assessment notices. Individuals, corporations, employers and non-residents remit their tax instalments to these centres either directly or through financial institutions.

Regional offices

For administrative purposes, Revenue Canada Taxation has divided Canada into five regions with a central office in each region responsible for operations. The five regional assistant deputy ministers report directly to the deputy minister.

The function of the regional offices is to ensure the uniform and impartial application of departmental programs and policies across Canada. The regional offices are also responsible for co-ordinating the activities of the district offices and taxation centres in their region.

Notes: Total income consists of net income from all sources before personal exemptions, pension contributions, and standard or other deductions. Although the minimum personal exemption for the 1984 tax year was $3,960, some taxpayers declaring total income of less than that amount were nevertheless taxable. Examples are immigrants and emigrants who received only a partial year's exemption in the year of migration.

Notes: In this table, income figures, especially average figures, should not be taken as representing all income earners in Canada. They represent only data for persons who have filed tax returns. Allocation of taxpayers by province has been made on the basis of declared province of residence on the last day of the year. Assessed taxable income does not equal total income less total exemptions because some returns in which exemptions, deductions and forward averaging deductions exceed the total income are taxable (with regard to lump-sum payments) but the taxable income is recorded as zero in such instances. While taxable income is recorded on some non-taxable returns, no tax is payable in such cases after the application of tax adjustments and tax credits.

Notes: Income figures in this table consist of income from all sources before personal exemptions, pension contributions, and standard or other deductions. Occupation in this table is determined by chief source of income. For example, a lawyer or doctor whose chief source of income is salary is classified as an employee; if investments, as an investor, and so forth. Federal tax consists of federal income tax and federal forward averaging tax.

Appendices

List of forms and publications available for use by the public

The Department, in administering the following acts and their related Regulations:

- a. Income Tax Act
- b. Canada Pension Plan (Part I)
- c. Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971 (Part IV)
- d. Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act has developed and printed "prescribed" and other forms, and information booklets and guides for use by the public

Copies of the forms and publications listed in this appendix may be obtained from any district taxation office.

In most cases, the forms and publications are made available in a bilingual format. However, in other cases, because of their size, separate English and French versions have been printed. The latter are indicated by an asterisk (*) beside the form number or title so that in ordering these forms or publications, the language required may be indicated.

In this appendix

- a. "I.T." means Income Tax Act
- b. "I.T.R." means Income Tax Regulations
- c. "I.T.A.R." means Income Tax Application Rules, 1971
- d. "C.P.P." means Canada Pension Plan
- e. "C.P.P.R." means Canada Pension Plan Regulations

DECLARATION OF TAXPAYER RIGHTS

THE CONSTITUTION AND LAWS OF CANADA ENTITLE YOU TO MANY RIGHTS THAT PROTECT YOU IN MATTERS OF INCOME TAX. YOU ARE ENTITLED TO KNOW YOUR RIGHTS. YOU ARE ENTITLED TO INSIST ON THEM. YOU ARE ENTITLED TO BE HEARD, AND TO BE DEALT WITH FAIRLY.

HELPING YOU EXERCISE YOUR RIGHTS REMAINS AN IMPORTANT ROLE OF THE STAFF OF NATIONAL REVENUE TAXATION AT ITS DISTRICT OFFICES AND OTHER LOCATIONS. FAIR TREATMENT OF A COMPLAINT IS ONE OF YOUR GREATEST RIGHTS.

FAIR TREATMENT IN ALL DEALINGS WITH NATIONAL REVENUE TAXATION MEANS IMPORTANT RIGHTS TO:

Information

You are entitled to expect that the Government will make every reasonable effort to provide you with access to full, accurate and timely information about the Income Tax Act, and your rights under it.

Impartiality

You are entitled to an impartial determination of law and facts by departmental staff who seek to collect only the correct amount of tax, no more and no less.

Courtesy and Consideration

You are entitled to courtesy and considerate treatment from National Revenue Taxation at all times, including when it requests information or arranges interviews and audits.

Presumption of Honesty

You are entitled to be presumed honest unless there is evidence to the contrary.

FAIR TREATMENT UNDER THE CONSTITUTION AND LAWS OF CANADA INCLUDES IMPORTANT RIGHTS TO:

Privacy and Confidentiality

In addition to other constitutional and legal rights, you have a special right that personal and financial information you provide to National Revenue Taxation will be used only for purposes allowed by law.

Independent Review

You are entitled to object to an assessment or reassessment if you think the law has been applied incorrectly. To protect this right, you must file your objection within 90 days of the assessment or reassessment. Filing an objection will start an independent review by departmental appeals officers. If they don't resolve the matter to your satisfaction, they will explain how you can appeal to the courts.

An Impartial Hearing Before Payment

Until you have had an impartial review by the Department or a court, you may withhold amounts disputed in formal objections filed after January 1, 1985. If you appeal to a higher court, you will be able to provide equivalent security instead of paying those disputed amounts.

Certain exceptions, set out in legislation to guarantee these rights, are applicable to frivolous appeals to the courts, or where collection is clearly in jeopardy.

YOU ARE ENTITLED TO EVERY BENEFIT ALLOWED BY THE LAW

You have a right to arrange your affairs in order to pay the minimum tax required by law. You can also expect your government to administer tax law consistently, and to apply it firmly to those who try to avoid paying their lawful share.
